"The potential utility of this is fairly broad," says Kishore Somayaji, a patent attorney with Latham & Watkins, a law firm that was not involved in the case. Beyond a scale, "This is really more a patent for any device that uses a digital display," Somayaji says. Apple filed its patent back in February. According to the patent, the company sees the display of such information as an "effective, efficient and compact solution to the problem of efficiently and intelligently displaying an amount of information on a display."

Apple adds that such displays are often small in size, leading to a lack of contrast and difficulty reading text on d0c515b9f4
