However, following the success of Weekend at Bernie's, Farley's portrayal of a womanising "Movie Man" was not to be. This role went to Baldwin. An R-rated comedy with violent, non-sexual humor, the story was set in New York City and was about a group of incompetent thieves who stole a commercial helicopter to flee a robbery which they botched. The film's title was derived from a 1990 book by author John Lescroart; the title refers to the expendability of the thieves in the film. The film was a box office success upon its release in 1988, and has earned mixed reviews from critics; it was a financial success, grossing over $5 million on a $13 million budget. Plot It's the day that the high-paying job at the Hotel Paris is going to be given to Roger Connors.
