HyperMotion Technology simulates and emulates the natural movements of these 22 players in real time, and is used to dynamically animate the players in all game modes, in all game modes for all players, using their unique and dynamic movements. The new feature is well known to fans of the franchise, as it was introduced in FIFA 16 as a Game of the Year edition, and only came to PlayStation 4 Pro as part of FIFA 17. The feature is aimed at a wider audience across all platforms, meaning all players will benefit when you walk onto the pitch and show them what your team is all about. You can find out more about FIFA 22's enhanced body sway physics, in-game lighting, animation and presentation improvements in the additional features below. HyperMotion Technology It is important to enable HyperMotion Technology in order to experience true game-play realism, especially in visually-intensive modes such as Big Match. Now, with this feature enabled, the on-screen camera follows the on-screen actions of the players and shows us how the game is played in-game. This provides a new level of immersion, where you can experience the game in a completely different way. How to enable HyperMotion Technology in FIFA 22: Click on OPTIONS in the main menu, choose GAMEPLAY, then choose REALISM. When the GAMEPLAY menu opens, scroll down and make sure you're on REALISM, in the top right corner of the menu. Choose Game Speed and

Adjustments, scroll down to HyperMotion Technology, and make sure you're on HyperMotion Technology. Once enabled, HyperMotion Technology will now appear on the main menu as an option, which you can toggle on and off via the new menu button to the right of the global substitution indicator. Here's the basic operation of HyperMotion Technology in FIFA 22: When a player executes an on-screen action (e.g. a shot), the on-screen camera will follow that player and show us the action. All players are now able to do full 360-degree movements in the game, as the on-screen camera follows the on-screen movement and does not follow the players themselves - meaning you can dive into tackles and run away, and the on-screen camera will follow you. Every player now has a move mask in the game that will show the
