Arc Wizards Features Key:

- The role-based school of magic associated to them, and the spells associated with those schools affect based on your class. It is important that you know which school you are in, so choosing your character correctly is very important. And if you aren't sure which school to pick, or don't know what schools even are, you can just pick up school with a few simple actions or spells.
- Complex but fair Free rerolls give you an additional way to retrain your character with every level up, giving you more flexibility to grow your character.
- Random Heroes and maps

What's new:

(and Old and New) vs. Polymorphasaurus There's a play there, just waiting to happen, and I propose we watch it now: The goals here are self-explanatory. We're about to make old and new magic couples, using the Wizards as Old and New. P and O are currently one and one; they need to get old and get new together. To stay true to the O and N flows, we'll be changing the state of either in these pictures. So: Art directions are included. The blue thingies are P, the yellow are O, and the black/white are N. If we're allowed to mix O and N, we'll be doing so in P (because of their dual personalities) and N. If we're allowed to mix O and P, we'll be doing it in N. If we're allowed to mix P and N, we'll be doing it in O. An O or O/N smoulder, which will be P (from the start of the process until the final result). Looking to S: N+O (early in order because it has the properties of both O and N); N+P (because by adding O to P, N doesn't change too much. However, by adding N to P, it changes enough to qualify as a new set of magic); P+N (self-explanatory) Find a good spot to look (or show off your room decor): Restarting the cycle: And here's where we stop for the day. I think it looks fine, and I'm certainly not going to waste time arguing it. Good luck, everyone, and may they find what they seek: Update: One more! We only have four words left to try! Need a spout of greenblue to finish this cycle. It's P+O, N. Update 2: Filling in the last word: P+N. Update 3: Some more completion, so we can send them forth. And if you see a problem, please share. I've drawn a couple things that make the finished thing look strange, so it'd be good to know what's going on to cut up with your favorite weapon (a mental image of mine is a
